Publishing & Graphic Services

What we do

Doctoral dissertations (around 400/year)

Electronic publishing

Graphic Services

Publishing & Graphic Services (PGS) helps doctoral students and other authors at the university with the printing process. We also make sure that the text will be published electronically. PGS also have a project called Graphic Services, which handles non-scientific material.

Acta

PGS has created templates for Word, Open Office and LaTeX to make it easy for the doctoral students and other authors to write their dissertaitons and books. We also hold courses in how to use the templates where the authors can ask questions about any problems they might have.

A good thing for the authors is that when they contact PGS they only have one contact. PGS handles the contact with the printers and have through a government procurement achived the best price for this kind of product. PGS also makes sure that the book follows the graphic profile for the university and for the series in which they are included (ACTA)
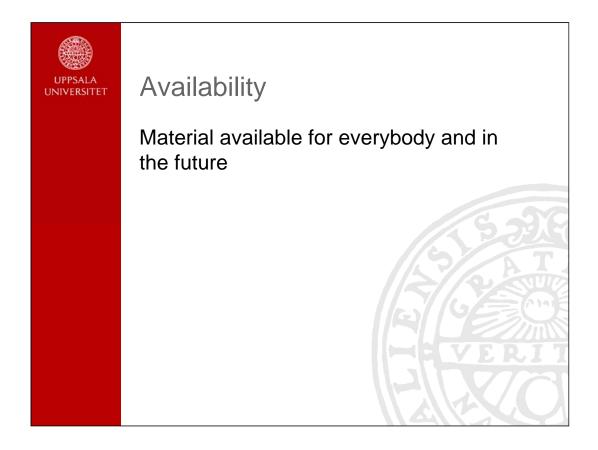

All this makes the printing process as cost efficient as possible.

Comprehensive dissertations

(required)

Monographs

(optional)

For the Comprehensive dissertations it is required that the summary is published on the university web. For the monographs it is optional, but the number of electronically published monographs has increased during the last years.

Graphic services

The purpose of Graphic Services is to assist university Faculties and Departments in the development of printed material, from the original idea to the finished product.

The purpose of Graphic Services is to assist university Faculties and Departments in the development of printed material, from the original idea to the finished product. It is a project that started in january 2006 and will be evaluated this year.

Availability

Material available for everybody and in the future

It is important that the material that comes from the university is available for everybody and also in the future. PGS is looking at ways to make the material available for people with different kinds of disabilities. It is also important that the material is saved in a format that will be available in the future.
